The qualification encourages learners to critically evaluate current academic concepts, theories and research in order to address key issues in Accounting and Finance. Learners will develop an understanding of current practice together with specialist analytical skills and knowledge.

Entry Requirements

To be admitted onto this programme, learners should either have an honours degree, preferably in a Business related subject or a professional qualification (or equivalent) from a recognised UK or overseas Higher Education institution and be fluent in written and spoken English. Evidence needs to be provided where learners have studied in a University where English is not the official language.

Assessment

This qualification is assessed through a portfolio of evidence of activities, which are developed by the College (subject to external quality assurance/verification by TQUK) and internally marked. These will include, online group discussions, written assignments, case studies, online question-and-answer sessions and also a 3-hour mandatory final examination at the end of each module.

Course Aims

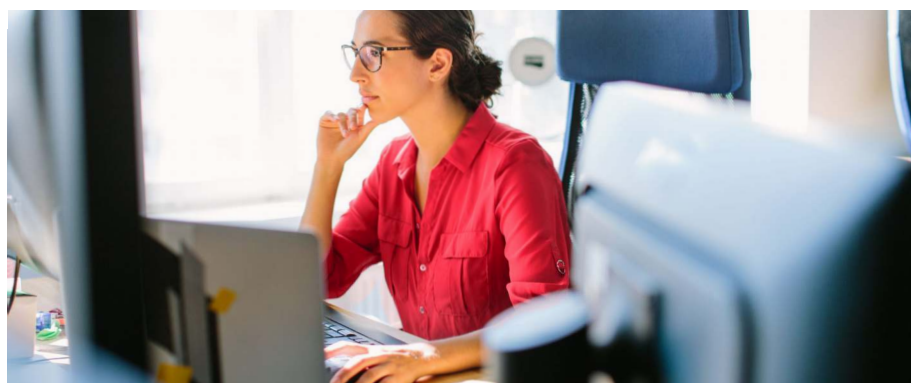

- To provide an intensive, academically demanding and applied programme that both critically evaluates and synthesises current academic concepts, theories and research to address key issues in Accounting and Finance (AF).
- To equip students with specialist analytical skills and knowledge to take advantage of opportunities and minimise threats within the complex real world environment.
- To develop students' problem-solving and decision-making skills and judgment in the field of AF.
- To facilitate students in the development of the deeper subject specific knowledge and skills in applied settings.
- To enable students to develop purposefully and refine their own comprehensive 'toolbox' of AF techniques and encouraging them to practice the application of such tools.
- To set in place an approach to life-long learning and the acquisition of skills which will enable them to apply a structured and reflective approach to both their personal development and their contribution to society.
